

THE ORATION OF MARCUS TULLIUS CICERO FOR
A. LICINUS ARCHIAS.

1. Si quid ingenii est in me iudices, quod quam If aught of talent is in me O judges, which how exiguum sit sentio; aut si qua exercitatio slight it may be I feel; or if any practice dicendi, in quâ non infitior me esse of speaking, in which I do not deny (that) I am mediocriter versatum; aut si aliqua ratio hujusce moderately experienced; or if any science of this same rei profecta ab studiis optimarum artium ac thing, started from the study of the best [liberal] arts and disciplinâ, a quâ ego confiteor nullum from instruction [training], from which I confess no tempus meæ ætatis abhoruisse, hic time [part] of my life to have [has] been averse, this A. Licinus debet vel in primis repetere a A. Licinus ought even in [among] the first to demand from me fructum omnium earum rerum me the fruit [benefit] of all these things [pursuits] prope suo jure. Nam quoad longissimè mea nearly by his own right. For even to the farthest my mens potest respicere spatium præteriti temporis, mind can look back (over) the space of past time, et recordari ultimam memoriam pueritiæ, repetens and recall the most remote recollection of boyhood. retracing inde usque, video hunc exstitisse thence till (now). I see this (man) to have [has] stood forth mihi principem, et ad suscipiendam, et ad to me as chief [leader], both in undertaking, and in ingrediendam rationem horum studiorum. marching upon [prosecuting] the science of these studies.

 Quod si hæc vox conformata hortatu But if this voice (of mine) formed by the encouragement que præceptis hujus, fuit aliquando saluti and precepts of this (man), was at any time (for) a safety nonnullis, debemus profectò quantum est situm in to some, we ought certainly as much (as) is placed in nobis fere et opem et salutem huic ipsi, us to bring both aid and safety to this (man) himself, a quo accepimus id, quo possemus from whom we have received this, by which we might (be able) opitulari et servare alios. Ac ne quis a to aid and to save others. And lest any one from nobis forte miretur hoc ita dici, [among] us by chance might wonder (that) this so to be [is] said, quod sit in hoc quædam alia facultas because there is in this (Archias) a certain other faculty ingenii que ne hæc ratio aut disciplina dicendi, of genius and not this science or discipline of speaking, ne nos quidem fuimus unquam penitùs dediti huic not we even [indeed] have always entirely been devoted to this uni studio. Etenim omnes artes, quæ pertinent one pursuit. For all the arts, which¹ may relate ad humanitatem habent quoddam commune vinculum, to culture have some common bond, et continentur quasi quâdam cognatione inter and are held together as if by some relationship among se.
 themselves.

2. Sed ne videatur esse mirum cui But that it may not appear to be wonderful to any one vestrum, me in legitimâ questione, et in of you, (that) I in a legal question, and in publico judicio, cum res agatur apud a public court, when the thing [the action] is tried before prætorem Romani populi lectissimum virum, a prætor of the Roman people, a most esteemed man, et apud severissimos iudices, tanto conventu and before most strict judges, (and) in such an assembly ac frequentiâ hominum uti hoc genere dicendi, and throng of men, should use this kind of speaking, quod abhorreat non modò a consuetudine which is at variance not only with the custom judiciorum verum etiam a forensi sermone : of courts but also with forensic [legal] speech quæso a vobis, ut detis mihi, [pleading]: I request of you, that you may grant me, in hac causâ, hanc veniam, accommodatam huic in this case, this indulgence, suitable to this reo, quemadmodum spero non molestam defendant, (and) just as I hope not disagreeable vobis, ut patiamini me dicentem pro summo to you, that you may allow me pleading for a very great poëtâ atque eruditissimo homine, hoc concursu poet and for a most learned man, in this gathering litteratissimorum hominum, hac vestrâ humanitate, of most cultivated men, before this your culture denique, hoc prætore exercente [this culture of yours], in fine, this prætor presiding at judicium, loqui paulò liberiùs de studiis the trial, to speak a little more freely of the studies humanitatis ac litterarum, et in personâ of culture and of letters, and upon a character ejusmodi, quæ, propter otium ac studium, of such kind, that, on account (his) retirement and study, est minimè tractata in judiciis que periculis, is very little practiced in public trials and (their) risks, uti propè quodam novo et inusitato genere to use nearly a certain new and unaccustomed manner dicendi. Quod si sentiam tribui que of speaking. Which if I feel to be [is] granted and concedi mihi a vobis, profectò perficiam, ut allowed (to) me by you, assuredly I will effect, that putetis, hunc A. Licinium non modo non you may think, (that) this A. Licinium must not only not segregandum a numero civium cum sit (to) be debarred from the number of citizens since he is civis, verùm etiam, si esset non, fuis-a citizen, but (that) even, if he were not, (he) ought to se adsciscendum.

 have [should] been admitted.

3. Nam ut Archias primum excessit ex pueris, For as Archias first grew out of boyhood, atque ab iis artibus, quibus puerilis ætas and from these branches, by which youthful age solet informari ad humanitatem contulit se ad is wont to be trained to culture, he devoted himself to studium scribendi; primum Antiochiæ (nam the study of writing; at first at Antioch (for natus est ibi nobili loco) quondam he was born there in a noble rank [family]) formerly celebri et copiosâ urbe, atque affluentī, a celebrated and opulent city, and abounding, eruditissimis hominibus, que liberalissimis studiis, in most learned men, and most liberal studies, contigit celeriter antecellere omnibus it happened (that he) speedily to excel [excelled] all gloriâ ingenii. Pòst in ceteris in the renown of (his) talents. Afterwards in other partibus Asiæ que cunctæ Græciæ, ejus adventus parts of Asia and of all Greece, his arrivals celebrabantur sic, ut expectatio hominis were celebrated so, that the anticipation of the man superaret famam ingenii, ipsius adventus was exceeding the fame of (his) talents, his arrival que admiratio expectationem. Italia erat and the admiration (surpassed) the anticipation. Italy was tunc plena Græcarum artium ac disciplinarum, then full of Greek arts and culture, que hæc studia colebantur et tum in Latio and these studies were cultivated both then in Latium vehementiùs, quam nunc in iisdem oppidis, et more ardently, than now in the same towns, and hic Romæ propter tranquillitatem rei publicæ here at Rome on account of the tranquillity of the republic non negligebantur. Itaque et Tarentini they were not neglected. Therefore both the Tarentinians et Regini et Neapolitani donarunt hunc and the Rhegians and the Neapolitans presented him civitate que ceteris præmiis; et omnes with (their) citizenship and with other gifts; and all qui poterant judicare aliquid de ingeniis (men) who could judge any thing concerning talents existimarunt dignum cognitione atque hospitio. thought (him) worthy (of their) acquaintance and hospitality.

Cum esset jam notus hac tantâ celebritate When he was already known by this so great publicity famæ absentibus, venit Romam, Mario of his reputation to those absent, he came to Rome, Marius consule, et Catulo. Nactus est, primùm, eos being consul, and Catulus. He found, at first, these consules, quorum alter posset adhibere consuls, of whom the one was able to provide (him) maximas res ad scribendum, alter cum the greatest subjects for writing, the other not only res gestas, tum etiam studium atque aures.

affairs performed, but also even study and ears

Statim Luculli, cum Archias esset [attention]. Immediately the Luculli, though Archias was etiam tum prætextatus, receperunt eum suam even then a young man. received him into their domum. Sed hoc non solum ingenii (sing.) ac house. But this not only was proof of (his) talents and literarum(pl.), verùm etiam naturæ atque of (his) learning, but also of (his) nature [disposition] and virtutis, ut domus, quæ fuerit prima of (his) virtue, that the house, which had been the first hujus adolescentiæ, eadem esset familiarissima of his youth, the same was most familiar senectuti. Erat illis temporibus jucundus to (his) old age. He was at those times agreeable

Q. Metello illi Numidico, et ejus filio Pio. to Q. Metellus, that Numidicus, and to his son Pius.

Audiebatur a M. Æmilio; vivebat cum He was listened to by M. Æmilius; he was living with

Q. Catulo, et patre et filio; colebatur Q. Catulus, both father and son; he was cultivated [sought] a L. Crasso. Cum teneret divinctam by L. Crassus. When he was holding attached consuetudine Lucullos vero, et Drusum, et by intercourse the Luculli indeed, also Drusus, and Octavios, et Catonem, et totam domum the Octavii, and Cato, and the whole family

Hortensiorum, afficiebatur summo honore; of the Hortensii, he was treated with the greatest honor; quod non solum colebant eum, qui for not only were they cultivating him, who studebant percipere atque audire aliquid, verum were desirous to learn and to hear something, but etiam, si qui forte simulabant. even, if any one by chance was feigning (this).

4. Interim, satis longo intervallo, cum Meanwhile, (after) a sufficiently long interval, when esset profectus cum L. Lucullo in Siciliam, et cum he had gone with L. Lucullus into Sicily, and when decederet ex eâ provinciâ cum eodem Lucullo, he departed from this province with the same Lucullus, venit Heracleam. Quæ cum esset civitas he came to Heraclea. Which since it was a city æquissimo jure ac fœdere voluit se in the most favorable rights and alliance he desired (that he) himself adscribi in eam civitatem; que cum ipse to [should] be enrolled in this city; and not only he putaretur dignus per se, tum auctoritate was thought worthy through himself, but also by the authority et graciâ Luculli impetravit id ab Heracliensibus. and favor of Lucullus, he obtained this from the Heracleans.

Civitas est data lege Silvani et Carbonis.
The citizenship was granted by the law of Silvanus and of Carbo.

“Si qui fuissent adscripti fœderatis civitatibus; “If any had been enrolled among the confederated cities; si tum cum lex ferebatur, habuissent if at that time when the law was passed, they had domicilium in Italiâ; et si sexaginta diebus essent a residence in Italy; and if in sixty days they had professi apud prætorem.” Cum hic haberet jam declared before the prætor.” As he was having already domicilium multos annos, professus est apud a residence many years, he made declaration before

Q. Metellum, prætorem, suum familiarissimum. Si Q. Metellus, the prætor, his most intimate friend. If dicimus nihil aliud nisi de civitate ac we say nothing else except concerning (his) citizenship and lege, dico nihil ampliùs; causa dicta est. Enim the law, I say nothing more; the cause is pleaded. For quid horum Grati potest infirmari? which of these (points), O Gratus can be invalidated? you will ne negabis esse adscriptum tum Heracleæ? not deny (that) he was enrolled then at Heraclea?

Adest vir summâ auctoritate, et There is present a man of the highest authority, and religione et fide, L. Lucullus, qui dicit se devoutness and integrity, L. Lucullus, who says (that) he non opinari, sed scire, non does not think, but (that) he knows, (that) he did not audivisse, sed vidisse non interfuisse, hear, but saw, (that) he was not present (merely), sed egisse. Heraclienses legati adsunt, nobilissimi but acted. Heracleian delegates are present, most honorable homines; venerunt causâ hujus judicii, cum men; they have come on account of this trial, with mandatis et cum publico testimonio; qui dicunt instructions and with public testimony; who say (that) hunc adscriptum Heracliensem. Hic tu desideras he (was) enrolled a Heracleian. Here you desire publicas tabulas Heracliensium, quas omnes scimus the public registers of the Heracleans, which we all know interisse Italico bello, tabulario incenso.

 (to) have perished in the Italian war, the registry having been burned.
 Est ridiculum, dicere nihil ad ea quæ It is ridiculous, to say nothing for these (proofs) which habemus; quærere quæ possumus non habere; we have; (but) to ask for (those) which we can not have;
 et tacere de memoriâ hominum, and to be silent concerning the recollection [testimony] of men, flagitare memoriam literarum; et cum (and) to insist on the testimony of records; and when habeas religionem amplissimi viri, you may have the devoutness of a most honorable man, (and) iusjurandum que fidem integerrimi municipii, the oath and faith of a most incorruptable municipality, repudiare ea, quæ possunt nullo modo to reject these (things), which can in no manner depravari desiderare tabulas, quas idem dicis be falsified (and) to require registers, which even you say solere corrumpi. At habuit non are accustomed to be tampered with. But he had not domicilium in Italiâ: is qui tot annis ante a domicile in Italy: he who so many years before civitatem datam, collocavit sedem omnium suarum citizenship was granted, had placed the seat of all his rerum ac fortunarum Romæ? At non effects and of all his fortunes at Rome? But he did not est professus. Immo vero iis tabulis professus declare. Yea verily in these registers did he declare quæ solæ ex illâ professione, que (his intention) which alone from that declaration, and collegio prætorum obtinent auctoritatem publicarum college of prætors obtains the authority of public tabularum.
 registers.

5. Nam cum tabulæ Appii dicerentur asservatæ For as the registers of Appius were said (to) have been kept negligentius, levitas Gabinii quamdiu fuit rather carelessly, the trifling of Gabinus as long as he was incolumis, calamitas post damnationem, safe, the misfortune after (his) condemnation, resignasset omnem fidem tabularum; Metellus, had taken away all the faith of (his) registers; Metellus, homo sanctissimus que modestissimus omnium, a man the most pure and most scrupulous of all (men), fuit tanta diligentia, ut venerit ad L. Lentulum was of so great carefulness, that he came to L. Lentulus prætozem, et ad iudices, et dixerit, se esse the prætor, and to the judges, and said (that), he was commotum liturâ unius nominis. Igitur his disturbed by the erasure of one name. Therefore in these tabulis videtis nullam lituram in nomen registers you see no erasure upon the name

A. Licinii. Quæ cum sint ita, quid of A. Licinius. Which [These] (things) since they are so, what est quod dubitetis de ejus civitate, is there that you may doubt concerning his citizenship, præsertim cum fuerit adscriptus quoque in especially as he has been enrolled also in aliis civitatibus? Etenim cum homines in other cities? For when the men in Græciâ impertiebantur civitatem Greece [Magna Græcia] were bestowing the citizenship multis mediocribus, et præditis aut on many ordinary men, and endowed either nullâ arte aut aliquâ humili, with no profession or some lowly one, gratuitò, credo Reginos aut Locrenses, aut gratuitously, I believe, (that) the Rhegians or the Locrians, or Neapolitanos, aut Tarentinos noluisse the Neapolitans, or Tarentines would be unwilling (that) id huic prædito summâ gloriâ this (should be granted) to him endowed with the greatest renown ingenii, quod solebant largiri scenicis of talent, which they were accustomed to grant to theatrical artificibus. Quid? cum ceteri, non modo post artists. What? when others, not only after civitatem datam, sed etiam post Papiam citizenship had been granted, but also after the Papian legem, irrepererint aliquo modo in tabulas eorum law, had crept by some means into the registers of these municipiorum; hic rejicietur, qui ne utitur municipalities; will he be rejected, who does not avail (himself) quidem illis in quibus est scriptus, quòd indeed of those in which he has been enrolled, because semper voluit se esse Heracliensem. he always wished himself to be (considered) a Heracleian.

 Requisiris nostros census scilicet. Est enim You demand our censuses, forsooth. It is then obscurum, proximis censoribus hunc fuisse unknown (that), under the last censors he was cum clarissimo imperatore L. Lucullo apud with the most illustrious commander L. Lucullus with exercitum; superioribus fuisse cum eodem the army; in the preceding (census) he was with the same, quæstore in Asiâ; primis Julio et Crasso a quæstor in Asia; (that) in the first (census) Julius and Crassus nullam partem populi esse censam.
 (being censors), no part of the people was listed.
 Sed quoniam census non confirmat jus But since the census does not confirm the right civitatis, ac tantummodò indicat eum, qui sit of citizenship, and only indicates him, who may be census se jam tum gessisse ita, pro listed, (that) he already then had conducted (himself) so, as cive; iis temporibus, quibus tu criminaris a citizen; at the same times, in which you charge (that) ne quidem ipsius judicio eum versatum esse not even in his own opinion did he exercise juri Romanorum civium, et sæpe fecit the right of Roman citizens, he both often made testamentum nostris legibus, et adiit a will (according) to our laws, and he entered on hereditates Romanorum civium, et delatus est inheritances of [from] Roman citizens, and he was reported ad ærarium in beneficiis, a L. Lucullo to the public treasury among the beneficiaries, by L. Lucullus proconsule.

 the proconsul.

6. Quære argumenta, si potes quæ.
 Seek (for other) proofs, if you can (find) any.

Enim hic nunquam revincetur neque suo For this (Archias) never will be refuted either by his own iudicio, neque amicorum.
 opinion, or (that of his) friends.

Quæres a nobis, Grati, cur tantopere You ask of us, O Grattius, why we are so greatly delectemur hoc homine. Quia suppeditat nobis charmed with this man. Because he supplies us ubi et animus reficiatur ex hoc (with that) whereby both the mind may be refreshed after this forensi strepitu et aures defessæ convicio forensic [public] noise [din] and the ears fatigued with wrangling conquiescant. An tu existimas, aut may find repose. Or do you suppose, either (that it) posse nobis suppetere, quod dicamus would be possible for us to have at hand, what we might utter quotidie, in tantâ verietate rerum, nisi daily, in such a variety of things [actions], unless excolamus nostros animos doctrinâ, aut we cultivated our minds by study, or (that) animos posse ferre tantam contentionem, nisi (our) minds could bear such great efforts, unless relaxemus eos eâdem doctrinâ? Ego vero we relaxed them by the same study? I indeed fateor, me esse deditum his studiis; confess (that), I am given to these pursuits; pudeat ceteros si qui ita abdiderunt let it shame others, if they have so buried se literis, ut possint neque affere themselves in letters, that they can neither bring nihil ex his ad communem nothing [anything] from these (studies), for the common fructum, neque profere in adspectum advantage, nor to produce (anything) to view que lucem. Autem quid me pudeat, iudices and to light. But why may I be ashamed, O judges qui tot annos vivo ita, ut unquam who so many years live [have lived] so, that ever [never] aut meum otium abstraxerit me, aut voluptas either my leisure may have drawn me away, or pleasure avocarit aut denique somnus may have called (me) aside or in fine sleep retardarit tempore aut commodo may have kept (me) back from the emergency or the advantage nullius? Quare quis tandem reprehendat of any one? Wherefore who, pray, may reproach me, aut quis jure succenseat mihi (dat.) si me, or who by right may be offended at me, if quantum temporum conceditur ceteris, ad as much time as is conceded to others, for obeundas suas res, quantum ad celebrandos transacting their affairs, as much for celebrating festos dies ludorum, quantum ad alias voluptates, festival days of games, as much for others pleasures, et ad requiem ipsam animi et and for the rest itself of the mind and corporis; quantum alii tribuunt tempestivis of the body; as much as others devote to protracted conviviis, quantum denique aleæ, quantum banquets, as much in fine as to dice, as much as pilæ: tantum egomet sumpsero to ball playing; so much (time) I for my part shall have taken mihi ad recolenda hæc studia? Atque hoc to myself for renewing these studies? And this ideo magis est concedendum mihi, quòd ex so much the more is to [must] be allowed to me, because from his studiis quoque hæc facultas et oratio these studies also this ability and oratory crescit, quæ, quantacumque est in me, increases, which, in whatever degree it exists in me, nunquam defuit periculis amicorum. Quæ never was wanting to the dangers of (my) friends. Which si videtur levior cui certe quidem if it may seem somewhat trifling to any one, certainly indeed sentio, ex quo fonte hauriam, illa quæ I know, from what sources I (may) draw, those (subjects) which sunt summa. Nam, nisi suasissem mihi ab are the most important. For, unless I had persuaded myself from adolescentiâ, præceptis multorum, que multis youth, by the precepts of many (masters), and by much literis esse nihil in vita, magnopere literary study (that) there is nothing in life, very greatly expetendum, nisi laudem atque honestatem, to be sought after, except praise and honesty, autem in persequendâ ea, omnes cruciatus moreover in following [attaining] these, (that) all the tortures corporis, omnia pericula mortis atque exsiliî, of the body, all the dangers of death and of exile, esse ducenda parvi; numquam objecissem are to be held as of small (account); never had I exposed me pro vestrâ salute in tot ac tantas myself for your safety to so many and so great dimicationes, atque in hos quotidianos impetus contests, and to these daily attacks profligatorum hominum. Sed omnes libri sunt of profligate men. But all books are pleni, voces sapientium plenæ, vetustas full, the voices [sayings] of the wise are full, antiquity plena exemplorum; omnia quæ jacerent in (is) full of examples; all which might have lain in tenebris, nisi lumen literarum accederet. darkness, unless the light of letters had drawn near,

Quàm multas imagines fortissimorum How many images [ideals] of the bravest virorum expressas, non solum ad intuendum men delineated, not only for contemplating verum etiam ad imitandum, et Græci et but also for imitating, have both the Greek and Latini scriptores reliquerunt nobis; quas ego, Latin writers left us; which I, semper proponens mihi in administrandâ always placing before me in conducting re publica, conformabam meam mentem et public matters, am moulding my mind and animum ipsâ cogitatione excellentium hominum. soul by this contemplation of preeminent men.

7. Quispiam quæret; quid? fuerunt illi ipsi Should any one inquire; what? were those same summi viri, quorum virtutes proditæ sunt illustrious men, whose virtues have been handed down literis, eruditi istane doctrinâ, quam tu effers in books, instructed in that very learning, which you extol laudibus. Est difficile confirmare hoc de omnibus; with praises. It is difficult to affirm this concerning all;

sed tamen est certum, quid respondeam. Ego but yet this is certain, which I may answer. I fateor multos homines fuisse excellenti animo confess (that) many men have been of preeminent minds ac virtute, et sine doctrina, propè and virtue, and without learning, (as if) nearly divino habitu naturæ ipsius, extitisse by the divine disposition of nature itself, (they) have become per se ipsos et moderatos et graves. through their own selves both discreet and important (men).

Adjungo etiam illud sæpius naturam, sine I add also this (that) more often nature, without doctrinâ voluisse ad laudem atque virtutem, quàm learning has availed for fame and virtue, than doctrinam sine naturâ. Atque ego contendo learning without nature. And I contend idem, cum quædam ratio, que conformatio at the same (time), when a certain system, and training doctrinæ accesserit ad eximiam atque illustrem of learning shall have been added to an exceptional and brilliant naturam, tum illud nescio quid præclarum ac nature, (that) then that I know not what glorious and singulare solere existere; ex hoc numero extraordinary is accustomed to take place; of this number esse hunc divinum hominem Africanum, quem nostri was this god like man Africanus, whom our patres viderunt; ex hoc C. Lælium fathers saw; of this (number was) C. Lælius (and)

L. Furium, moderatissimos et continentissimos L. Furius, most discreet and most temperate homines; ex hoc fortissimum virum, M. Catonem, men; of this (that) most vigorous man, M. Cato, illum senem, et doctissimus illis that old man [the elder], and the most learned in those temporibus, qui profectò si nihil adjuvarentur times, who indeed if they had not been aided literis ad percipiendam que colendam virtutem, by letters for [in] understanding and cultivating virtue, numquam contulissent se ad studium earum.
would never have applied themselves to the study of them.
Quod si hic tantus fructus non ostenderetur, Even if this so great advantage should not be shown, et si delectatio sola peteretur ex his studiis, tamen, and if delight only is sought from these studies, however, ut opinor, judicaretis hanc adversionem as I think, you should judge (that) this employment animi humanissimam ac liberalissimam. Nam of the mind (is) most humane and liberal. For ceteræ sunt neque omnium temporum, other (occupations) are (suited) neither (for) all times, neque ætatum, neque locorum; hæc studia nor (for all) ages, nor (for all) places; these studies alunt adolescentiam, oblectant senectutem, ornant foster youth, delight old age, adorn secundas res, adversis præbent perfugium ac prosperity, in adversity they offer refuge and solatium, delectant domi, non impediunt comfort, they delight (us) at home, they do not hinder (us) foris, pernoctant cum nobis, peregrinantur, outside[abroad], they pass the night with us, they travel abroad, rusticantur.

 they go to the country (with us).

8. Quod si ipsi possemus neque attingere Although if we ourselves could neither attain to hæc, neque gustare nostro sensu, tamen these, nor taste (them) with our senses, however deberemus mirari ea, etiam cum videremus we ought to admire them, even when we see (them) in aliis. Quis nostrum fuit tam agresti ac in others. Who of us was (of) so rude and duro animo, ut nuper morte Roscii insensible a mind, that [as] lately at the death of Roscius non commoveretur? Qui, mortuus esset he was not [not to have been] moved? Who, has died cum senex, tamen propter excellentem when an old man, yet on account of (his) preeminent artem ac venustatem, videbatur omnino art and grace, was appearing altogether (as if he) debuisse non mori. Ergo ille tantum ought not to die. Therefore (when) he only motu corporis conciliarat sibi, a by the movement of (his) body had gained for himself, from nobis omnibus, amorem, nos negligemus us all, (our) love, should we neglect incredibiles motus animorum, que celeritatem the incredible movements of the mind, and activity ingeniorum (pl.)? Quoties, iudices, vidi ego hunc of genius? How often, O judges, have I seen this Archiam, (enim utar vestra benignitate, quoniam Archias, (for I will use your kindness, since tam diligenter attenditis me, in hoc novo you are so attentively listening to me, in this novel genere dicendi), quoties vidi ego hunc, cum kind of pleading), how often have I seen him, when scripsisset nullam literam, dicere ex tempore he had written not a letter, (to) recite extempore magnum numerum optimorum versuum, de a great number of the most excellent verses, concerning iis ipsis rebus, quæ tum agerentur! the very same affairs, which were then being transacted! quoties revocatum dicere eandem rem, as often as he was recalled to repeat the same thing, (he did it), commutatis verbis atque sententiis! Quæ with changed words and sentences! Those things vero scripsisset accuratè que cogitate, indeed which he had written accurately and with reflection, vidi ea sic probari, ut perveniret ad I have seen them (to be) so approved, that he had attained to laudem veterum scriptorum. Ego non diligam the praise of the ancient writers. Shall I not love hunc? non admirer? non putem this (man)? not admire (him)? may I not think (that) defendendum omni ratione? Atque, sic to [I must] defend (him) in every manner? Moreover, we have so accepimus a summis que eruditissimis learned from most eminent and most learned hominibus studia et doctrina ceterarum rerum men, (that) the studies and science of other things constare et præceptis et arte, poëtam consist both in precepts and art, (that) the poet valere naturâ ipsâ, et excitari viribus prevailed by nature itself, and (that) he was excited by the power mentis, et inflari quasi of (his) mind, and (that) he was breathed into [inspired] as if quodam divino spiritu. Quare suo jure ille by some divine spirit. Wherefore by his own right does this noster Ennius appellat poëtas sanctos, quod our Ennius call poets holy, because videantur esse commendati nobis quasi aliquo dono they seem to be recommended to us as if by some gift atque munere deorum. Igitur, judices, hoc nomen and present of the Gods. Let then, O judges, this name poëtæ sit sanctum apud vos, homines humanissimos, of poet be sacred with you, men most cultured, quod nulla barbaria unquam violavit. Saxa which (name) no barbarous (nation) ever has violated Rocks et solitudines respondent voci; immanes bestiae and deserts reply to (his) voice; savage beasts sæpe flectuntur atque consistunt cantu; nos, are often turned aside and halted by (his) song; we, instituti optimis rebus, non moveamur voce instructed to the best things, may not we be moved by the voice poëtarum? Colophonii dicunt Homerum esse suum of the poets? The Colophonians say (that) Homer was their civem, Chii vindicant suum, Salaminii citizen, the Chians claim (him as) their own, the Salaminians repetunt, Smyrnæi verò confirmant esse demand (him), the Smyrnians indeed assert (that) he was suum, itaque etiam dedicaverunt delubrum theirs, (and) therefore also they have dedicated a shrine ejus in oppido; permulti alii præterea of his in (their) town; a great many others besides pugnant atque contendunt inter se. fight and strive among themselves.

9. Ergo illi expetunt alienum, quia fuit Therefore they claim a stranger, because he was poëta, etiam post mortem; nos repudiabimus a poet, even after (his) death; shall we reject hunc vivum, qui est noster, et voluntate this (Archias) alive, who is ours, both by (his) free will et legibus? præsertim cum olim Archias and by the laws? especially when heretofore Archias contulerit omne studium atque omne ingenium, contributed all (his) zeal and all (his) talents, ad celebrandam gloriam que laudem Romani to celebrating the glory and praise of the Roman populi? Nam et adolescens attigit Cimbricas people? For also (when) a young man he touched on the Cimbrican res, et fuit jucundus illi C. Mario ipsi, qui affairs and was pleasing that C. Marius himself, who videbatur durior ad hæc studia. Neque enim seemed somewhat harsh towards such studies. For indeed est quisquam tam aversus a Musis qui non is there any one so averse to the Muses who would not facile patiat^{ur} eternum præconium suorum readily suffer (that) the eternal panegyric of his laborum mandari versibus. Aiunt labors to [should] be committed to verse. They say (that) Themistoclem, illum summum virura Athenis, dixisse, Themistocles, that greatest of men in Athens, had said, cum quæreretur ex eo, quod acroama, aut cujus when it was inquired of him, what player, or whose vocem, libentissimè audiret; “ejus a quo voice, he would most willingly hear; “his by whom sua virtus optimè prædicaretur.” Itaque his virtue [exploits] might be best proclaimed.” Therefore ille Marius, item eximiè dilexit L. Plotium, cujus that Marius, also greatly loved L. Plotius, by whose ingenio putabat ea, quæ gesserat, talents he thought (that) those, (things) which he had performed, posse celebrari. Vero totum Mithridaticum bellum, could be celebrated. But all the Mithridatic war, magnum atque difficile, et versatum in multâ great and difficult, and carried on in much varietate terrâ que mari, expressum est ab hoc; variation by land and by sea, has been related by this qui libri illustrent non modo L. Lucullum, (Archias); which books illumine not only L. Lucullus, fortissimum et clarissimum virum, verum etiam (that) most bold and distinguished man, but also nomen Romani populi. Enim Romanus populus, the name of the Roman people. For the Roman people, Lucullo imperante, aperuit Pontum vallatum quondam Lucullus commanding, opened up Pontus fortified hitherto, et regiis opibus, et naturâ ipsâ both by the royal resources, and by the nature itself [the very nature] regionis; exercitus Romani populi, eodem of the country; the army of the Roman people, the same (Lucullus) duce, non maximâ manu fudit innumerabiles being general, with no very large force routed countless copias Armeniorum; est laus Romani populi, forces of Armenians, it is the praise of the Roman people, (that) amicissimam urbem Cyzicenorum, consilio the most friendly city of the Cyziceni, by the strategy ejusdem esse ereptam atque servatam ex of this same (Lucullus) was delivered and preserved from omni regio impetu, ac ore ac faucibus every royal attack, and from the mouth and jaws totius belli; semper feretur et prædicabitur of the whole war; it will always be related and celebrated nostra, L. Lucullo dimicante, cum (that) ours, — L. Lucullus fighting (as our general), when classis hostium depressa, ducibus interfectis, the fleet of the enemy was sunk, the commanders having been slain, et illa incredibilis navalis pugna apud Tenedus; also that incredible naval battle at Tenedos; (that) nostra sunt tropæa, nostra monumenta, nostri ours are the trophies, ours the monuments, ours triumphi. Quare quorum ingeniis hæc the triumphs. Therefore by whose talents these things efferuntur, ab eis fama Romani populi are reported, by them is the glory of the Roman people celebratur. Noster Ennius fuit carus superiori celebrated. Our own Ennius was dear to the elder Africano; itaque etiam is putatur esse Africanus; therefore also he is supposed to have been constitutus e marmore in sepulchro Scipionum. At placed of [in] marble on the sepulchre of the Scipios. But ejus laudibus certè non solùm ipsi, qui by his praises certainly not only those, who laudantur, sed etiam nomen Romani populi are praised, but also the name of the Roman people ornatur. Cato, proavus hujus tollitur is honored. Cato, the great grandfather of this (Cato), is extolled in cælum (sing.); magnus honos adjungitur rebus to the skies; great honor is attached to the affairs Romani populi. Denique, omnes illi Maximi, of the Roman people. Finally, all the Maximi, Marcelli, Fulvii, decorantur, non sine the Marcelli, (and) the Fulvii, are honored, not without communi laude nostrum omnium. the common praise of us all.

10. Ergo nostri majores receperunt illum, Therefore our ancestors received him [Ennius], qui fecerat hæc, hominem Rudinum, in civitatem; who had done this a man (of) Rudia into citizenship; nos ejiciemus hunc Heracliensem de nostra shall we reject this Heracleian [Archias] from our civitate, expetitur multis civitatibus, autem in citizenship, sought by many cities, but in hac constitutum legibus?
 this (city) created (a citizen) by the laws?

Nam si quis putat minorem fructum gloriæ For if any one thinks that a smaller harvest of glory percipi ex Græcis versibus, quam ex is to be obtained from Greek verses, than from Latinis, vehementer errat; propterea quod Græca Latin verses, he exceedingly errs; because (that) Greek leguntur in fere omnibus gentibus, (works) are read among almost all nations,

Latina continentur suis finibus, exiguis Latin (works) are confined to their own limits, small (enough) sane. Quare si eæ res, quas gessimus assuredly. Wherefore if these things, which we have performed definiuntur regionibus orbis terræ are bounded (only) by the regions of the circle of the earth [of the world], debemus cupere, quò tela nostrarum we ought to desire (that) whither the weapons of our manuum pervenerint, eodem gloriam hands may have reached, (that into) the same (place) (our) glory que famam penetrare; quòd cum hæc and renown to (should) penetrate; because not only these sunt ampla populis ipsis, de quorum (things) are glorious to the peoples themselves, concerning whose rebus scribitur, tum certè, hoc est maximum affairs it is written, but also certainly, this is the greatest incitamentum, et periculorum et laborum iis, incentive, both of [to] dangers and of [to] labors for those, qui dimicant de vitâ, causâ gloriæ. Quam multos who fight for life, for the sake of glory. How many scriptores suarum rerum ille magnus Alexander writers of his exploits the great Alexander dicitur habuisse cum se! Atque is tamen, cum is said to have had with him! And he moreover, when adstitisset ad tumulum Achillis in Sigeo, inquit, he stood at the grave of Achilles on Sigeum, said,

 "O fortunate adulescens, qui inveneris Homerum
 "O fortunate young man, who may have found a Homer præconem tuæ virtutis." Et vere: nam nisi illa the herald of thy fame," And truly: for if that Ilias extitisset, idem tumulus, qui contexerat Iliad had (not) existed, the same grave, which covered ejus corpus, obruisset etiam nomen. Quid? his body, would have buried also (his) name. What? nonne hic noster Magnus, qui, cum did not this our own great one [Pompey], who, when adæquavit fortunam virtute donavit he equalled (his) fortune with (his) powers, present Theophanem Mitylenæum, scriptorem suarum rerum Theophanes the Mitylenæan, the historian of his deeds civitate in concione militum? et illi with the citizenship in an assembly of the soldiers? and those nostri fortes viri, sed rustici ac milites commoti our brave men, but rustics and soldiers moved quâdam dulcedine gloriæ, approbaverunt illud by a certain charm of glory, approved that magno clamore, quasi particeps ejusdem laudis? by a great shout, as if participants of the same praise?
 Itaque credo si Archias non esset Romanus Therefore I suppose if Archias had not been a Roman civis legibus, ut potuisset non perficere citizen by the laws, that he could not accomplish (that) donaretur civitate ab aliquo imperatore! he should be presented with the citizenship by some commander!

Cum Sulla donaret Hispanos et Gallos, When Sylla granted the Spaniards and the Gauls (the citizenship), credo repudiasset hunc petentem! quem I suppose he would have refused him petitioning! whom [Sylla] nos vidimus in concione, cum malus poëta de we have seen in a public assembly, when a bad poet from populo subjecisset ei libellum, quòd (among) the people had presented him a petition, because fecisset epigramma, in eum, tantummodo alternis he had made an epigram, upon him, only in alternate longiusculis versibus, statim jubere somewhat longer verses, (that he) immediatly ordered præmium tribui ei, ex iis rebus, quas a present to be assigned to him, from these things, which he tunc vendebat, sub ea conditione, ne then was selling, under this condition, (that) he should not scriberet quid postea. Qui duxerit write any thing afterwards. (Would not he) who had thought sedulitatem mali poëtæ, tamen dignam aliquo the industry of a bad poet, yet worthy (of) some præmio, expetisset ingenium et virtutem et reward, have sought out the talents and ability and copiam in scribendo hujus? Quid? neque copiousness in writing of this (one)? What? could he neither impetravisset a suo familiarissimo have obtained (the citizenship) from his most intimate (friend)

Q. Metello Pio, qui donavit multos civitate, Q. Metellus Pius, who had granted many the citizenship, neque per se neque per Lucullos? qui neither through himself nor through the Luculli? who præsertim usque eò cuperet scribi [Metellus] especially so greatly desired (that it) to [should] be de suis rebus, ut etiam dederet suas written concerning his affairs, that he even gave his aures poëtis natis Cordubæ, sonantibus ears [attention] to poets born at Cordova, (though) uttering quiddam pingue atque peregrinum. something clumsy and outlandish.

11. Neque enim est hoc dissimulandum, (quod Nor indeed is this to be dissembled, (which potest non obscurari); sed ferendum præ can not be concealed); sed is to [must] be brought before nobis; omnes trahimur studio laudis, et us; (that) we all are drawn on by a desire of praise, and quisque optimus ducitur maximè gloriâ. each best [foremost] (one) is led chiefly by glory.
 Illi philosophi ipsi, etiam illis libellis, quos Those philosophers, themselves, even in those pamphlets, which scribunt de contemnendâ gloriâ, inscribunt they write concerning despising glory, will inscribe suum nomen; in eo ipso, in quo despiciunt their names; in this (case) itself, in which they despise prædicationem que nobilitatem volunt prædiccommendation and renown they wish to be commendari de se, ac se nominari. ed concerning themselves, and (that) themselves to [should] be named.
 Quidem Decimus Brutus, ille summus vir et Indeed Decimus Brutus, that great man and imperator, exornavit aditus suorum templorum ac commander, adorned the approaches of his temples and monumentorum carminibus Attii sui amicissimi. monuments with the verses of Attius his most intimate friend.
 Jam vero, ille Fulvius, qui bellavit cum Ætolis,
 (And) even also, that Fulvius, who fought with the Ætolians, Ennio comite, non dubitavit consecrare Ennius being (his) companion, did not hesitate to consecrate manubias Martis Musis. Quare imperatores, the spoils of Mars to the Muses. Wherefore (when) generals, in quâ urbe propè armati, coluerunt nomen in any city almost armed, [in arms], revered the name poetarum, et delubra Musarum, in eâ togati of poets, and the shrines of the Muses, in this (city) civil judices debent non abhorrere a honore Musarum judges ought not to be averse to the honor of the Muses et a salute poetarum.
 and to the safety of poets.

Atque, ut faciatis id libentius, jam And, that you may do this the more willingly, I will now judices, indicabo me vobis, et confitebor vobis O judges, declare myself to you, and, I will confess to you quodam de meo amore gloriæ, fortasse nimis something concerning my love of glory, perhaps too acri, verum tamen honesto. Nam hic attigit eager, but yet honorable. For this (Archias) touched on atque inchoavit versibus res, quas nos and has begun in (his) verses the deeds, which we gessimus in nostro consulatu, simul cum vobis, have performed in our consulship, together with you, pro salute hujusce imperii, et pro vitâ civium, for the safety of this very empire. and for the life of the citizens, que pro universâ re publica; quibus auditis, and for the entire republic; which (verses) having been heard, quòd visa est mihi magna et jucunda res, because it appeared to me a great and agreeable subject, adænavi hunc ad perficiendum. Enim virtus I equipped him for completing (it). For virtue desiderat nullam aliam mercedem laborum que desires no other reward of labor and periculorum, præter hanc laudis et gloriæ; quâ dangers, except that of praise and renown, which quidem judices detractâ, quid est, indeed O judges having been taken away, what is there, (for) quod in hoc tam exiguo, et tam brevi curriculo vitæ, which in this so small, and so short a course of life, exerceamus nos in tantis laboribus? Certe si we should exert ourselves in such labors? Certainly if animus præsentiret nihil in posterum, et si the mind was forecasting nothing as respects the future, and if regionibus, quibus spatium vitæ est circumscriptum, in the limits, in which the space of life is circumscribed, terminaret omnes suas cogitationes iisdem, it should bound all its thoughts by the same, it would nec frangeret se tantis laboribus, neque not break itself (down) by so great labors, neither angeretur tot curis que vigiliis, neque would it be tormented with so many cares and watchings, nor toties dimicaret de vitâ ipsâ. Nunc quædam so often would it contend for life itself. Now a certain virtus insidet in quoque optimo, quæ virtue resides in every best [prominent] (man), which concitat animum noctes et dies stimulis gloriæ, arouses the mind night and day by the stimulus of glory, atque admonet, commemorationem nostri and reminds (it), (that) the remembrance of our nominis esse non dimittendam cum name is not to be sent away [lost] with tempore vitæ, sed adæquandam cum omni the time of life, but is to be made equal with all posteritate.

 posterity.

12. An vero omnes videamur esse tam parvi Do we then indeed all appear to be of such little animi, qui versamur in re publica, mind, [so narrow minded,] who are occupied in the republic, [in atque in his periculis que laboribus public matters,] and in these dangers and labors vitæ, ut cum usque ad extremum spatium of life, that when even to the extreme [final] space duxerimus nullum tranquillum atque [period] (of life) we have drawn no tranquil and otiosum spiritum, arbitremur omnia moritura peaceful breath, (that) we should think all things are to perish simul cum nobis? An, cum multi summi together with us? And whether, when many great homines studiosè reliquerunt statuas et imagines men have carefully left behind statues and images simulacra non animorum, sed corporum, debemus representations, not of the mind, but of the body, ought non multò malle relinquere effigiem not we much more to prefer to leave behind (us) the effigy nostrarum virtutum ac consiliorum expressam of our virtues and of (our) deliberations expressed et politam summis ingeniis? Ego vero arbitrabar, and elaborated by the greatest geniuses? I indeed thought, omnia, quæ gerebam, jam tum in (that) all, which I was performing, already then in gerendo, me spargere ac disseminare in performing, I was scattering and disseminating for sempiternam memoriam orbis terræ.

the eternal recollection of the circle of the earth [of the world].

Sive hæc vero abfutura est a Whether this (remembrance) indeed will be absent from meo sensu post mortem, sive, ut my perception after death, or, as sapientissimi homines putaverunt, pertinebit the most wise men have thought, it will appertain ad aliquam partem mei, nunc certe to some portion of myself, now truly quidem delector quâdam cogitatione que indeed I am pleased with some such thought and spe.

hope.

Quare, judices, conserve hominem eo Wherefore, O judges, preserve a man (of) this [such] pudore, quem videtis comprobari tum dignitate modesty, whom you see approved not only by the dignity amicorum, tum etiam vetustate; [high rank] of friends, but also even by (their) continuance;

autem ingenio tanto quantum convenit existimare moreover of talent so great as it is fitting to believe id, quod videatis esse expetitum (that) it, which [as] you may see, to have [has] been sought ingeniis summorum hominum; causa vero by the talents of the greatest men; the cause indeed (is) ejusmodi, quæ comprobetur beneficio legis, of this kind, which may be established by the benefit of the law, auctoritate municipii, testimonio Luculli, by the authority of the municipality, by the testimony of Lucullus, tabulis Metelli. Quæ cum (and) by the registers of Metellus. Which (things) since sint ita, petimus a vobis, judices, si they may [are] be so, we entreat of you, O judges, if debet esse qua commendatio non modo there should be any recommendation not only humana, verum etiam divina in tantis negotiis, human, but even divine in such great affairs, ut accipiatis eum sic in vestram fidem, that you would receive him so in your faith, [protection,] ut videatur esse levatus vestrâ humanitate, potius that he may seem to be relieved by your kindness, rather quàm violatus acerbitate, qui semper than injured by (your) severity, (he) who has always ornavit vos, qui vestros imperatores, adorned you, who (has celebrated) your commanders, qui res gestas

 who has (commemorated) the affairs performed [the exploits] Romani populi, qui etiam profitetur se esse of the Roman people, who also promised (that) he is daturum æternum testimonium laudum, his nostris to give an eternal testimony of praises, to these our recentibus, que vestris domesticis periculis, que qui recent, and your domestic dangers, and who est eo numero, qui semper sunt habiti is in this number, (of poets), who have always been held atque dicti sancti apud omnes. Quæ and called holy among all (nations). Which (things) de causâ dixi pro meâ in regard (to) the cause [case] I have related according to my consuetudine, judices, breviter que simpliciter, custom, O judges, briefly and simply, (and) confido ea probata esse omnibus.
 I trust (that) these (things) have been approved by all (of you).
 Quæ remota a meâ que judiciali consuetudine, Which removed from my own and the judicial practice, locutus sum et de ingenio hominis, et I have spoken both concerning the talents of the man, and communiter de ipsius studio, ea, in general respecting his studies, these (things), judices, spero esse accepta in bonam partem; O judges, I hope (to) have been received in good part;

certe scio ab eo, qui exercet I certainly know (they) (will be) by him, who presides judicium.

at the trial.